the most part on the contract of the parties. The picturesque features are rapidly falling away before the en-croachments of modern civilization. As in France, married life gives the Turkish woman a freedom they never had as girls. They can go visiting then and receive their friends, and an undreamt of vision of placement of vision of dreamt of vision of pleasuring in the ance is embroidering a vest for a stranger without her husband's knowledge. Another has surprised Ali's daughter giving a flower to a passing man. A third is horror-struck that her friend should be immodest enough to let her veil down in the street. And if they want to be particularly venomous toward a fair acquaintance they tell in concert that she is in love with a man that wears a hat. This last is the worst reproach that can be heaped on a Turkish woman. No Mohammedan ever wears a hat-the fez is universal. And to say that a woman loves a man with a hat implies not only that she has forher modesty, but her religion. The Turkish women are much more narrow and conservative than the men. Except in out-of-the-way districts Christians are no longer liable to insult from masculine Mohammedans, but nine out of ten of the older women, even in Constantinople, will look askance at a Christian unbeliever and "May the dogs devour your bones." --Constantinople Cor.
